Rose Bowl Game Facts

First Post-Season College Bowl Game

First played in 1902, the Rose Bowl Game was the first-ever post-season College Football Bowl Game, making the Rose Bowl Game "The Granddaddy of Them All."®

100th Anniversary / 88th Game

The first Rose Bowl Game was played 100 years ago between Michigan and Stanford. Michigan won that game 49-0. Because the game was such a blowout, college teams were reluctant to participate in the Rose Bowl Game for several years after that. The second Rose Bowl Game was held in 1916, making the 2002 game the 88th Rose Bowl Game.

2 National Championship Games

This year's matchup between the Hurricanes and the Nebraska Huskers will be only the third time in the Rose Bowl Game's 88-game history that the number 1 team has played the number 2 team for the National Championship. Prior to this game, #1 USC defeated #2 Wisconsin 42-37 in 1963 and in 1969, #1 Ohio State defeated #2 USC 27-16.

24 National Championship Teams

The winner of the 2002 Rose Bowl Game will be the 25th National Championship team to play at the Rose Bowl Game.

14 Heisman Trophy Recipients

14 Heisman Trophy recipients have played in the Rose Bowl Game. However, only 9 of these played in their Heisman year. Nebraska's Eric Crouch will be the 15th Heisman winner to participate in the Rose Bowl Game.

Game Firsts

In addition to being the first post-season college football bowl game, the Rose Bowl Game was the first wirephoto transmission of a bowl game, the first transcontinental radio broadcast of a sporting event and the first national telecast of a college football game.
